Life-long immunity is a desirable goal, but it is not always achieved. In the case of measles, for example, a single dose of vaccine may not be enough to ensure that the individual develops the immunity that is needed to prevent a second infection. In the case of hepatitis B, a second dose of vaccine is recommended to ensure that the individual develops the immunity that is needed to prevent a second infection. In the case of tetanus, a booster dose of vaccine is recommended every 10 years to ensure that the individual develops the immunity that is needed to prevent a second infection.
